AMUSEMENTS.

I'm afraid the plot will leak out.

Be quiet. The plot can't leak out.

Here's where the plot thickens.

-From "The Gingerbread Man." "The Gingerbread Man" is altogether palatable. Last night's audience in are so close together that one is hardly finished before the next one begins. And the music is well up to the high standard of the books. With a company that, for fun-making and singing, is not often equaled in musical comedy, the entertainment provided by "The Gingerbread Man" is worth the while KELSON.—In this city, March 17, 1908 of the most sophisticated play-goer. There is a lot of refreshment in such a production. Fred J. Nice in the name part is entitled to the honors. Mr. Nice is a very come to life, you'M have a picture of 1:30 p. m. Mr. Nice as he appeared on the stage of the Salt Lake theatre last night. His makeup is as nearly perfect as such a makeup can well be, and his floppy disjointed motions are ludicrous to the superlative degree. There is nothing acter. Add to this a talent for dancing that is most remarkable, and it becomes clear that Mr. Nice is a very valuable man, It is easy to forget troubles, little and big, while watching and enjoying him.

Mrs. characteristics added considerably to the hilarity of (Wednesday) at 3 p. m. Interment City the occasion. The third comedian, cemetery. Friends invited. James McElhern as Good Fairy, was amusing in spots. He strove to please and succeeded often, but his work was mostly a combination imitation of Eddie Foy and Frank Daniels.

Practically all of the soloists in the company are exceptionally good. This is notably true of Miss Mabel Day who, as Mazie Bon Bon, afterward the Princess Sugar Plum, won a tribute of spontaneous, genuine approval that is not often given to a newcomer here tribute followed Miss Day's 'Springtime," which she gave magnifi-The other principal Miss Nellie Nice as Margery Daw and Miss Evelyn Kellogg as Jack Horner, talked and danced and sang their way straight into the hearts of their auditors. Miss Kellogg is a fine, big girl, with a handsome face and as pretty a pair of arms and hands as were ever seen on any stage. And the rest of her seen on any stage. And the rest of her figure, since she made no secret of it, good to look at, though somewhat inclined to embonpoint. Miss Nice is a dancer of talent and a comedienne of marked ability.

A particularly fine effect last of the comedy, a gem among many gems, "Moon, Moon," admirably sung by Miss Kellogg. A young woman, Miss Lillian Jacobs, was swung slowly across the stage on a crescent moon, following a hurrying mass of moonlit clouds and singing the answer to the lover's inquiry. People who look for a rational plot in "The Gingerbread Man" are going to be disappointed. Those who go to see it expecting to receive instruction had better remain at the fireside reading Creasy's "Decisive Battles of the World," or something of that sort. But for those who want an evening of pure amusement, an enter-

F. Lawrence Walker, business manager for Charles B. Hanford, is in town arranging for the appearance of his star. Mr. Walker reports that Mr. Hanford, who will be seen here in "Antony and Cleopatra," has been enjoying splendid business in spite of the socalled hard times.

Representing the Grace George company, to appear in "Divorcons" the last half of the week at the Salt Lake the-atre, Edwin R. Dayle arrived yester-day from the west. Mr. Dayle brings glowing reports of Miss George's suc-company that Salt Lake eess and assurances that Salt Lake play-goers have something real in the reat line coming up next week.
